

French Lose Naval Base But Will Continue Fight For Rest of Madagascar

Vichy Admits Surrender of Diego Suarez and Churchill Announces
British Losses of 1,000

VICHY, FRANCE, May 7 (AP)—The French, acknowledging the capitulation to the British of the big Madagascar naval base of Diego Suarez, nevertheless announced tonight their intention to defend "every other point" of the island.

The governor-general of Madagascar, Armand Annet, said in a message telling of the fall of Diego Suarez after three days of fighting that the rest of the island "will be defended with the same resolution," and in reply the Vichy government sent a message of encouragement and praise.

Diego Suarez Taken Over by British

By NOLAN NORGAARD
LONDON, May 7 (AP)—British troops and warships took possession today of Madagascar's great naval harbor of Diego Suarez after two days of brisk fighting and began negotiating the terms of a surrender by which they hoped to obtain the peaceful capitulation of all that Vichy French island.

This tough, quick occupation—accomplished in less than forty-eight hours after the establishment of the first British bridgehead at a loss of around 1,000 of the British force—was announced in Commons by Prime Minister Churchill, who appealed gravely to the French people thus to consider the episode:

"... A recognizable fact in the liberation of their country, including Alsace-Lorraine, from the German yoke."

He told of the surrender of the French military and naval commanders, but there was no immediate indication here as to whether the Vichy-controlled governor-general of the island, Armand Annet, had himself joined in capitulating or whether he intended to try to organize some sort of guerrilla resistance in the interior.

It was regarded most likely here that in view of the spirited though brief defense the great bulk of effective French troops had already been accounted for.

No Action from Vichy
What the Vichy government would now do raked the most intense interest, but late in the day there had been no sign of action from the capital.

Vichy claimed that as of 1.30 p. m. French time (7.30 a. m. eastern war time) the French forces still were holding out, but it was subsequently learned that communication from Madagascar to France had been out since morning and it appeared that the Laval government thus could hardly have accurate information directly from there.

The German-controlled Paris press began calling for reprisals; there was some speculation here that Laval might take the excuse to hand over to the Axis some form of naval aid—perhaps French cruisers and destroyers to the German fleet.

The conquest of Diego Suarez, which in the terminology of British charts stands for the whole of the bay and not merely the French naval base of that name, was accomplished by powerful British land and naval forces—commandos, marines, regular infantry, warships, planes—in a great show of strength which, Churchill said was deliberately intended to hold bloodshed to a minimum.

It was the sequence of events as announced in various official quarters here.

Land Forces Seize Village
While British warships held frontal positions before the bay, British land forces in converging movements seized the village of Diego, the chief town of the harbor.

Bulkeley Describes Destruction Of Japanese Ships by Americans

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7 (AP)—Lieut. John D. Bulkeley and three fellow torpedo boat officers, who spirited General Douglas MacArthur away from Corregidor, reported in person today that their mission to the Philippines had been completed at a cost to Emperor Hirohito of four ships, including a cruiser, four planes and two armored landing boats.

The Long Island City, N. Y. hero of the dashing little PT boats related in a matter-of-fact way how on one occasion they came upon a heavily armored enemy cruiser in the dead of night. Result: "The ship sank completely in approximately twenty minutes."

The lethal boats found Japanese armored landing boats attempting to sneak up behind General Jonathan M. Wainwright's men. Result: We let fifty Japanese drown after one boat sank because they opened

British Cruiser Lost in Battle With Submarine

But Otherwise German Attack on Convoy Proves Failure

LONDON, May 7.—The 10,000-ton British Cruiser Edinburgh was lost last week in German submarine, surface and air attacks on two British convoys plying the vital Arctic supply route to Russia, the admiralty announced tonight, but despite the severity of the assaults, spread over several days, the British accomplished their mission with relatively small loss among the other naval and merchant vessels.

One attacking German destroyer was sunk and another was hit and severely damaged, and at least three Nazi bombers were destroyed.

The Edinburgh was crippled by enemy torpedoes and had to be abandoned in tow and sunk by the British themselves while she was homeward bound with a convoy which already had delivered its goods. One convoy vessel also was sunk.

Attack Second Convoy
The second convoy attacked was a large string of ships carrying "important war supplies" to the bitterly-contested Russian front. Although it was attacked by repeated waves of dive-bombers and torpedo-carrying planes which sank three ships, the British nevertheless succeeded in delivering ninety per cent of their cargo, the admiralty stated.

Assuming all of the convoy ships were of approximately the same size, this would indicate that the convoy originally was composed of about thirty ships.

Casualties apparently were relatively small, although it was not specifically so stated. Casualties aboard the Edinburgh were mentioned.

Torpedo Hits Edinburgh
The attacks on the two convoys began April 30 and lasted through May 3. The homeward-bound convoy was struck first, a submarine's torpedo disabled the Edinburgh's steering gear on the afternoon of April 30.

The Edinburgh was able to proceed under her own power, but at a speed reduced below her normal.

Japanese Launch Terrific Drive Against Chinese

General Offensive To Seize Free China Believed under Way

Smash Ahead in Yunnan Province Area Despite Heavy Losses

By SPENCER MOOSA

CHUNGKING, China, May 7 (AP)—The Japanese armies which have raced into China proper on the Burma Road brought up artillery today in a savage attempt to break the Chinese defense lines, amid ominous indications of general offensive against the Free China of Chungking and Chiang Kai-Shek.

Driving so hard and so fast that the defenders were unable to conduct planned demolitions along the great supply road, the Japanese out of Burma were known to have forged ahead at least as far as Chefang, twenty-five miles behind the fallen border town of Wanting.

Jap Casualties Heavy

Heavily supported by their mobile artillery as well as from the air, they were attacking time after time and, although the high command said the Chinese were holding their lines for the time being and inflicting heavy casualties, it was indicated that the defenders' chief hope in this Yunnan province area lay in flanking attacks on the invaders' extended lines.

(To informed students of Japan's military intentions it appeared the invaders may well be planning to synchronize a drive northeastward through Yunnan province toward Chungking with a new offensive from the old Japanese-Chinese fronts in Shansi, Honan and Hupeh provinces, northeast and east of Chiang's capital.)

(The Japanese themselves hinted today that they planned to use the Burma Road as a major avenue of invasion when they said the chief objectives of their Burma campaign had been attained with the entry into Yunnan and occupation of Aikang on the Burma west coast.)

On the Burma road some 100 miles deeper into Yunnan from Chefang lies Paoshan, which has been bombed so heavily as to suggest it is an immediate objective of the invasion columns. The Japanese also may believe it to be a base for Chinese and American volunteer group aircraft.

Other Towns Bombed

Other of Yunnan's chief towns are being bombed in strong force, perhaps to paralyze the movement of Chinese reinforcements or to soften the defenses for the invading forces.

On the west in narrow upper Burma the Japanese army which has been pursuing retreating British forces up the Chinwin valley toward India was said to have turned east, apparently to cut off Chinese units which are still fighting in the vicinity of Mandalay, which fell to the invaders last week.

Chinese authorities said Bhamo at the head of Irrawaddy river navigation some forty miles west of the Chinese border, and Myitkina, comparatively large Japanese forces were put ashore several weeks ago. A communicate earlier today esti-

Church Leaders Oppose Dancing In Beer Tavern

Object To Giving License to Proprietor of Salisbury Hall

SALISBURY, Md., May 7 (AP)—Decision on a tavern owner's application for a dance hall license was being withheld today by the Wicomico county commissioners after the application was opposed by church leaders.

"We have found that to give dance hall permits to a man who has a beer license is a procedure that always invites trouble," the Rev. Dr. Hamilton P. Fox told the commissioners. "A beer hall and dance hall combined is far more injurious than either operated separately. The combination is fatal from a social and moral standpoint."

H. B. Larmore, of Nanticoke, was the applicant.

The Rev. E. E. Crockett opposed issuance of the license because, he contended, the tavern already had a license to sell beer and no establishment licensed to sell beer should be permitted to operate a dance hall.

Witnesses for Larmore said the place bore a good reputation, and Carlisle Walter, retired Baltimore city policeman, declared he had "seen no disorder there, no children drinking or dancing," and added "there was no reason for complaint."

Five such hearings had been scheduled for this week, but four were postponed.

Japanese Report Wainwright Gave Up All Islands

Unconfirmed Communique
Says He Asked To Avoid Sacrifices

By WILLIAM F. FRYE

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP)—An unofficial and unconfirmed report that the Japanese required surrender of the small units of American-Philippine forces still fighting on various islands of the archipelago as a condition for ending their attacks on the Manila Bay forts was announced today by the War department.

In a communique worded carefully to make clear the completely unofficial nature of the report, the department said a broadcast from a Japanese-controlled radio station in Manila said that Lieutenant General Jonathan M. Wainwright had acceded reluctantly to this condition to avoid further sacrifice, and had issued appropriate orders to his field commanders.

It was recalled immediately here that when resistance of the American-Philippine troops on Bataan peninsula ceased April 9, there was a similar unconfirmed report that the Japanese had demanded the surrender of Corregidor and other Manila Bay forts before they would cease their pounding of the collapsing defenders of the peninsula.

Last Word from Wainwright

In some of the last reports received by the department from Wainwright before communications with Corregidor were interrupted early in the morning of May 6, the general said the Japanese were reported to be bringing up reinforcements at several points on the island of Mindanao to wipe out resistance on that large southern island.

Small units of American and Philippine army troops, operating from the hills of northern Mindanao, have inflicted severe losses on the Japanese in sudden and spectacular raids.

Similar forces have been reported still operating recently, even in the hills of northern Luzon, and there has been no indication that the enemy has succeeded in ending the resistance of troops in the central islands of Panay and Cebu, where

Flying Fortress Hard To Down, Hero of Philippines Declares

SEATTLE, May 7 (AP)—Added praise for the army's Flying Fortress, was voiced today by Capt. Hewitt Terrell Wheelock, one of the heroes of the Philippines campaign.

Heading for the vicinity of Legaspi, P. I., to bomb six enemy transports, a flying fortress piloted by Wheelock ran into a group of Japanese zero fighters. One of the bomber's four motors was shot out of commission, the gas tank of another motor ran dry, the front tires were shot flat and the rear wheel was perforated with bullets. But Wheelock returned it safely to its base.

The feat won praise for Wheelock from President Roosevelt in his most recent fire-side chat.

Wheelock came here to address the

Cloves, Nutmeg, Pepper On Restricted List

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP)—The War Production Board today imposed restrictions on deliveries of seven important spices which will have the effect of cutting retail sales by fifty per cent.

Deliveries of black pepper are permitted at the same rate as a year ago, and WPB said there was two years' supply of black pepper in this country.

Morgenthau Asks Drastic Cut in Tax Exemptions

Would Have Married
Couples Allowed Only
$1,200

By DONALD A. YOUNG

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP)—To the surprise of Congress, Secretary Morgenthau proposed today a drastic lowering of individual income tax exemptions—to the point where a single person making $11.60 a week would be taxed.

In order to add $1,100,000,000 to the administration's original goal of $7,600,000,000 in new taxes, the treasury head recommended that the present $750 exemption for single persons be cut to $600, the $1,500 exemption for married couples to $1,200, and the $400 exemption for each dependent to $300.

When the treasury's tax program was presented to Congress last March, Morgenthau had said he was not at that time in favor of any change in the exemptions. But today he told the House Ways and Means committee in a letter that "the time has now come to revise" the treasury's original program designed to raise $3,200,000,000 more from individual income taxpayers, chiefly through sharply increased surtax rates in the middle and low income brackets.

Russians Launch New Attempt To Free Leningrad

Drive Wedge between Two German Armies in Major Attack

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, May 7 (AP)—The Red army, making what appeared to be the strongest attack in many weeks to break the long siege of Leningrad, was reported tonight to have driven a wedge between two German armies, encircled one Nazi detachment in an important sector and wiped out several centers of resistance in the bogs west of Russia's second city.

Thus, said Soviet dispatches, the Germans not only were forestalled in their attempts to get spring attacks under way with fresh reserves, but had been forced to retreat from a number of winter vantage points.

A road which had united the northern and southern sections of the besieging force was cut, the Russians said, by the capture of a junction point which the Germans had held all winter. (It appeared this might be Krasnovodsk, twenty miles south of Leningrad.)

Woman Not Held For Shooting of Negro Intruder

Mrs. Bertha Virts Kills
Man Who Entered Her Home at Night

BRUNSWICK, Md., May 7 (AP)—State's Attorney Patrick M. Schnauffer said today Mrs. Bertha Virts, 27, was justified in shooting the negro who entered her home early this morning in the defense of herself and her children.

He added that unless further developments would warrant such an action, she would not be prosecuted.

Sheriff Horace M. Alexander said Mrs. Virts was in her home with her four children and a woman guest when she was awakened about 2 a. m. by a noise downstairs. Her husband was at work in the Brunswick railroad yards.

Called to Intruder

He quoted Mrs. Virts as recounting that she called out, asking who had entered.

The answer was, "just a crazy man."

She loaded a single-barrel 16-gauge shotgun, and with her guest, Elizabeth Fletcher, holding an oil lamp, crept downstairs where she was confronted by the negro. After asking him why he was in the house, she said she pulled the trigger, fearing he would harm her or her children.

The blast hit the negro in the left side of the neck, killing him instantly.

Alexander said a social security card found in the dead man's pocket bore the name of Charles Henry

Submarines, in Separate Action, Account for Two Cargo Ships and Tanker

Total Loss to United States in Major Engagement Off
Solomon Islands Is Only Three Planes; Battle
Balks Japanese Attempt To Cut Life Line to Australia; Navy Reports "Very Excellent News"

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP)—An American naval force, intercepting a Japanese squadron apparently striking at the flank of the life line to Australia, sank eight enemy vessels, damaged four and destroyed six planes at a total United States cost of only three planes, the navy announced today.

The furious sea battle, authoritatively regarded here as possibly the first in which strictly American forces have engaged the Japs in a general naval encounter, occurred last Monday in the vicinity of the Solomon Islands, lying northeast of Australia and northwest of the supply route bastions of New Caledonia and the New Hebrides islands.

SUB SINKS 3 JAP SHIPS

The naval communique reporting the results of the battle also disclosed that U. S. submarines operating in the Western Pacific had sunk three more Japanese ships. Thus, the enemy's total ship losses announced today were eleven sunk, including seven warships, and four damaged, as follows:

In the Solomons:
Sunk—one light cruiser, two destroyers, four gunboats and one supply vessel.

Damaged—One 9,000 ton seaplane tender, one light cruiser, one cargo vessel and one transport.

In U. S. submarines operations:
Sunk—one medium sized cargo ship, one medium sized tanker, and one small cargo ship.

State Governments Promise Aid In Removing War Effort Hurdles

By IRVING PERLMETER

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP)—Under thinly veiled threats of federal intervention, representatives of the state governments closed a three-day meeting here today with informal promises to remove voluntarily any local legal barriers to the war effort.

In the three days of speeches, they had been told that highway regulations which interfere with the loading and movement of war materials trucks, sanitary ordinances which waste scarce metals, dairy regulations which hamper milk purchases for the army, and similar hindrances must be eliminated for the duration of the war.

Not a single resolution was adopted. Federal officials who conducted the meeting said they did not want resolutions that did not have the effect of law, and would keep

Jap Ship Losses Total 250
The sinkings raised the unofficially tabulated total of Japanese ship losses due to United Nations operations to 250, including 193 warships of all types and fifty-five commercial vessels. They also raised the bag of Japanese ships successfully attacked by far ranging United States undersea raiders to thirty-nine sunk, twelve probably sunk and eleven damaged.

Not since the combined Australian-American bombing of an enemy ship concentration off Lea and Salamaua, New Guinea, had such a United States success been reported by the navy.

That action, carried out mostly by American forces, resulted, the navy announced March 18, in the sinking or damaging of twenty-three Japanese ships including twelve war vessels.

The exact nature of the battle in the Solomons was not shown by the navy's communique, which was restricted to a relation of results obtained. A fuller account, officers said, must await later reports from the Pacific.

But on the bases of what the communique indicated, naval experts said that the Solomons action appeared to have been a large scale sea battle between strictly American and Japanese forces and since results were so clearly known to the Americans it may have occurred in daylight. The use of the term "naval engagement" it was said.

close tabs on the actual legal action taken when the representatives go home. No deadline was set, however, for local action.

While most of the federal speakers soft-pedaled intervention talk, Lieutenant General Brehon B. Somervell, head of all the army services of supply, put it into these words:

"We Americans wouldn't relish such edicts. But the time may come, the situation may be so desperate that the federal government has to step in and enforce its will."

"I urge you to prevent it by getting together in the American way and doing the job yourselves."

"If we're going to beat Hitler, we have to do it now and if in the process of beating him a few last regulations and a few local ordinances have to be stretched—why, I say, stretch 'em out of them."

Passenger Travel On Railroads May Soon Be Rationed

Bus Rides May Also Be Curtailed, Officials Declare

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP)—Rationing of passenger travel on railroads and buses was described today as "definitely in prospect" while the government sent every city of over 10,000 population a blue-print for efficient use of public and private transportation.

In addition, it planned an appeal to motorists having more than five tires to sell the extras to the government.

In a day which found Congress and the government departments increasingly concerned over the rubber and transportation situations, there were these developments:

Robert Patterson, undersecretary of war, told a press conference that Americans must quit using their automobiles for "Sunday driving" visits to Cousin Joe and getting parties because their tires must be saved for possible war use.

May Appeal to Motorists

One of the officials who has endorsed pending legislation which would authorize the government to ration private automobiles, Patterson said an appeal was planned to motorists to sell to the government any tires they may possess beyond their fifth or spare.

Emphasizing that the "millions of tons of rubber now rolling on the highways" must be conserved, Patterson said "the time might come when some workers in war plants might have to have the benefits of those tires."

Officials of the office of defense transportation said rationing of passenger space on railroads and inter-city buses was in prospect within the next few months, but that no decisions had been reached on just how this would be done—by issuance of credentials to "essential" travelers or some less formal method.

Plan to Stagger Hours

The ODT published a manual to be sent to every community over 10,000 outlining a system for staggering hours and promoting group use of automobiles. Joseph B. Eastman, director, said the aim of staggering hours was to prevent peak loads of factory workers from using mass transportation facilities at the same hours as school children, office workers and shoppers.

The ODT manual, saying some workers would soon find themselves with only three usable tires, suggested an exchange should therefore be set up which will provide the medium for getting the tires from such automobiles into use on some other auto which has reached a similar state of tire wear.

Will Probe Rubber Sources

The House committee on coinage, weights and measures decided to investigate "the various sources of rubber and rubber substitutes in the Western Hemisphere with the intent of determining whether or not curtailment of civilian uses is necessary."

An independent rubber dealer, Elmer K. Simpson of New York, had told the committee that South and Central America had enough mature rubber trees now to meet "all the requirements of our war effort and the needs of our people many times over."

Other rubber experts have asserted that Latin-America could supply only a fraction of this country's needs.

Chairman Reynolds (D-NC), of the Senate committee considering the auto rationing bill, said there was no immediate prospect that rationing would be necessary. His statement was made in a telegram to Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, who protested a proposal to take over cars of motorists convicted of driving over forty miles an hour.

area, Antsirana, and the Diego Suarez naval base itself. The last is deep in the bay south-west of Antsirana, which was captured by a main attack from the south supported by the diversion action of royal marines landed in the north.

Aside from the main ground thrusts north and east, a subsidiary land force move northeast from Ambararata Bay.

Immediately the fighting ceased, it was stated here, British mine-sweepers began clearing the narrow mouth of Diego Suarez bay in preparation for the entry of the entire British naval squadron.

This and other measures, said an informed source, would be part of prompt British action to assure control by the United Nations of the whole island and its 3,000-mile coastline and to convert Diego Suarez into a base for allied naval operations in the Indian ocean.

Churchill's announcement of the successful conclusion of the major attack—which was intended to thwart Axis designs on Diego Suarez was brief and subdued.

Strong Forces Used

"In order to prevent bloodshed as far as possible," he said, "very strong forces of all arms were employed and preparations were made over the last three months."

"Landings, as already made public, were successfully accomplished, and by Tuesday evening our troops were in contact with French forces in and before Diego Suarez and before the promontory of Antsirana and the promontory of Oranija."

"The first assault on the Antsirana position at dawn yesterday was repulsed with losses that may have exceeded 1,000 men, but Major General Sturges of the Royal Marines, who commands the troops on the island, attacked during last night and captured the promontory of Antsirana."

"The French naval and military commanders surrendered. The town of Diego Suarez also was captured."

"Early this morning a further attack was made on the batteries at Oranija in the entrance to the harbor."

"These now have surrendered and a protocol has been drawn up between the commanders of either side."

"Minesweepers, forming part of the powerful covering force left under Admiral Seytre, which had been assembled, have already begun their work and it is expected that the fleet will enter the harbor about 3:30 this afternoon."

"These operations, which are not without risks of various kinds, have been carried out with great dash and vigor."

"The French also fought with great gallantry and discipline. We grieve that bloodshed has occurred between troops of two countries whose peoples at heart are united against the common foe."

"We trust that the French nation will in time to come regard this episode as a recognizable fact in the liberation of their country, including Alsace-Lorraine, from the German yoke."

He estimated that $100,000,000 of the recommended $1,100,000,000 increase would come from 6,900,000 new taxpayers who would be compelled by the lower exemptions to file returns.

The $1,000,000,000 would come from the higher payments the lower exemptions would require from the approximately 23,000,000 persons who must file income tax returns under present law.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The British seizure of the French naval base on Madagascar means that the United Nations are preparing to call a halt on Japanese aggression in the Indian ocean, and are paving the way for an ultimate two-front counter attack, there and in the Pacific.

Prime Minister Churchill made that quite clear in announcing that the French had surrendered and that a powerful British fleet was already moving into Diego Suarez bay. Its pivotal value in the revised allied strategy, forced by the unexpectedly early fall of Singapore and subsequent disasters in the Dutch Indies, Burma and the Philippines, is strongly emphasized by Churchill's statement that preparation for the Madagascar moves began three months ago.

Plans Made Long Ago

Singapore surrendered February 15 but its fate had been fore-shadowed as British Imperial back-tracked down the Malay peninsula under Japanese hammering. It seems clear that the reshuffling of British and probably American sea power to provide the force now concentrated in northern Madagascar waters began even before the actual fall of Singapore island.

Coupled with Churchill's letter to a favored parliamentary candidate—significantly enough a naval officer—the impression that the Madagascar operation implements a heartening new phase of the struggle for the Allies gains strength. The prime minister told Lieutenant Joyson-Hicks that "the time approaches when our accumulated strength will be matched against our enemies in every theater of war."

Attack Well Organized

It is now revealed that the British attack on Madagascar was organized in such overwhelming force as to insure not only the capture and secure holding of the key base, but its use offensively in due course. The size and composition of the war fleet now based in Diego Suarez bay could not be revealed if it were known. That it includes battleships and plane carriers, perhaps American as well as British, is conjectured.

Its mere presence in the Indian ocean has ominous potentialities for Japan. Battle odds on the Bay of Bengal flank of the Nipponese advance in Burma have been imperiously shifted in Allied favor. Madagascar serves to explain also British failure to reinforce the Burma front where the monsoon rains appear likely to hold up a Nipponese mass attack on either India or China.

Despite a swift Japanese advance into the Yunnan province of China up the Burma Road almost to the Salween gorge, it is still uncertain whether it is not primarily designed to take up a defensive position there for the wet season. Japanese communication lines through lower Burma to Rangoon and the Sittang estuary, the only available supply routes, will be through monsoon-flooded valleys within days.

thirty two and one-half knots. Thus slowed, she and the convoy were attacked the following afternoon in stormy weather by three destroyers which made five separate attempts to break through the escort and destroy the convoy, each one being beaten off. It was in this fighting that the one convoyed ship, which was in ballast, went down. Seven men were killed on two other ships.

On the morning of May 2 the crippled Edinburgh again was accosted by three German destroyers, apparently the same ones, in heavy weather and low visibility. The Edinburgh now was in tow, but she and British destroyers immediately engaged the enemy, and this time sank one of the Nazi destroyers and severely damaged a second.

Sunk by Own Forces

During the fight, however, another torpedo hit the Edinburgh. "She was abandoned," said the admiralty, "and later had to be sunk by our own forces, as towing was no longer practicable in the weather conditions prevailing."

The attack on the outward-bound convoy was begun on the afternoon of May 1, by six Junkers 88 dive bombers striking suddenly from the stormy sky. One of them was shot down, while the convoy and its escort went unscathed.

On the evening of the following day, however, six torpedo-carrying planes attacked, and three of the convoyed ships were struck by torpedoes and sank. In this assault one of the attackers was shot down.

A final attack came on the evening of May 3. This last thrust was unsuccessful, causing only minor damage to one ship. One Junkers 88 was shot down.

This Arctic action presumably was the same in which the German high command three days ago announced a 10,000-ton British cruiser had been sunk. The Germans then claimed that six convoyed ships totalling 37,500 tons also were sunk.

The Navis were using many aircraft in an effort to turn the tide of the land fighting at Leningrad, but they were said to be taking heavy losses. One Red air force unit reported the destruction of seven German planes in a single day.

Roads Becoming Dry

Activity was mounting generally on the northeastern front, where snow has disappeared from the forests and the sun is beginning to dry the roads.

A number of fresh German detachments appeared in the Lake Ilmen sector (where the Germans yesterday said they had reestablished communications with the long-encircled Sixteenth army), and heavy fighting has now been in progress for a month.

The Germans were resorting to their old tactics of parachutist landings and "psychological attacks" around Lake Ilmen, but the Russians said they were meeting waves of Germans with point-blank artillery fire at ranges of 150 to 300 yards, and mowing them down with "really colossal" losses.

The daily average of German dead and wounded in this sector was said to be 1,000, and at one point, Russian dispatches said, the Germans lost 2,500 officers and men.

Beamer, address unknown. A payroll stub found also, the sheriff said, was from Ralph E. Mills Co. of Roanoke, Va.

The sheriff said he, his deputy Paul B. Rhodes, State Police Corporal Martin Puncke and Hyanniswick Police Chief Lee "Merriman" went to the Virts home after a call for help was relayed to him by the Frederick city police.

No charges were preferred against Mrs. Virts, Alexander said, and Schnauffer's decision not to prosecute came after a conference between the officials.

Japanese Report

ated that approximately 11,500 men were surrendered to the Japanese in the Manila Bay forts, bringing to more than 50,000 the number of American-Filipino troops now presumed to be prisoners in the Philippines.

The figure was only approximate, since the garrisons of Corregidor and the three other forts at the bay entrance may have been reduced by casualties in the last few days of fighting. The department said it had received its last report of the forts' strength on April 15, when the total was 11,574.

Communication Cut Off

There has been no communication with Corregidor since the morning of May 6 and recent reports from General Wainwright, contained no specific references to losses in killed and wounded.

When the landing of enemy assault troops on the battered island was first reported two days ago, the nearest available estimate of Corregidor's garrison was upward of 7,000. A communique today, however, disclosed that on April 15 there were 2,275 naval personnel, 1,570 marines, 3,734 American soldiers, 1,280 Philippine scouts, 1,446 soldiers of the Philippine army and 1,269 civilians on the four islands.

The casualties included some civilians and possibly a small number of troops not assigned to regular units.

Q-Boat Campaign Rough on Germans

Submarine Commander Complains about British Surprise Attacks

LONDON, May 7 (AP)—A German submarine commander broadcasting over the Berlin radio said tonight that the allies had launched a Q-boat campaign against Axis U-boats.

Q-boats were developed during the last war to counteract the submarine menace. They were trawlers and other small craft carrying heavy arms but so concealed that the submarines were caught unawares. The commander in Berlin said his crew sighted a small steamer in the Atlantic off the American coast.

So innocent appearing was the cargo boat, he added, that he did not think it worth while to launch a torpedo. He brought his craft to the surface planning to sink the boat by gunfire.

"When we approached the enemy to give him his death blow we were greeted with a hail of gunfire," the German officer said. "Heavy guns and machine-guns which had been hidden by artificial sides and other objects of the cargo boat suddenly came into action. Depth charges were hurled at us."

"So clever had been the maneuvering of the cargo boat that it caught us unawares, and as it was, our command bridge was hit by sharpshooters."

"I was furious when I realized that this trap might have cost us another U-boat. Only by a miracle were we able to crash-dive and escape from the heavy fire without losing our boat."

McArthur and "attack hostile shipping in the Philippine waters wherever we might find it."

"When our usefulness was at an end and our mission completed, we were flown out."

Sinks Jap Cruiser

He related, still in a matter-of-fact tone, of the last PT attack off Cebu island.

"In that attack we sank a Japanese light cruiser of 6,000 tons with two motor torpedo boats," he said.

"At approximately 3 p. m. the army furnished us information that a Japanese destroyer was proceeding down the Cebu coast. We planned to attack south at midnight."

"We met the Jap cruiser at this point, with one destroyer close by and three additional destroyers in the nearby vicinity. PT34 attacked first and struck twice. PT34, under heavy shelling and illumination, attacked and struck twice."

"That was his story of the sinking of the cruiser. He told how it began sinking by the stern, finally going under in approximately twenty minutes."

Getting away was another story. "One enemy destroyer chased PT34 to Cebu where it (PT34) was divebombed by four seaplanes at dawn. Lieutenant Kelley shot down one seaplane."

"PT40 was chased to North Mindanao where it lost its pursuers in a fast burst of speed."

It's Easier Than You Think To Learn To Sew

A clever needlewoman has always been able to look like a millionaire's bride on a poor man's income. These days, hundreds of women are realizing it is no longer just a question of wanting to look fashionable. Besides their home and regular job duties, dozens of new defense duties keep cropping up, and a smart woman has to look trim and ready, as well as fashionable, on a time budget. And if she's a patriotically thrifty woman she'll want to do it at the lowest possible cost. That calls for sewing her own.

How To Prolong The Life of Baby's Rubber Things

These are the enemies of rubber goods: oil, gasoline, solvents, dampness and heat. If you want your rubber sheets, baby's bath equipment, and panties to last longer, follow these simple rules: clean off oil or grease immediately with a dry cloth. Wash rubber in lukewarm water and mild soap. Dry rubber thoroughly and fold so it won't wrinkle or crease. Store rubber in a cool, dry place away from heat or steam pipes. Keep rubber things away from light when not in use. A little extra care can add life and help you conserve what you have.

Those Forty Thousand Must Be Rescued

NOW THAT Corregidor and the forts in Manila bay have fallen to the Japanese, only sporadic guerrilla resistance is being offered to the invader in the 7,000 islands that constitute the Philippines. That these American fortresses held out for five months against overwhelming odds and with all supplies and reinforcements cut off is proof, if any were needed, of the fighting quality and valor of the American soldier.

From the day the Japanese attacked, American strategy in the Philippines has been to make the Jap pay dearly for every foot gained, to force him to pour troops and equipment and planes in endless array into the conflict, while the United Nations prepared to stand him off on far-flung fronts, to be followed by a great offensive.

This strategy was ably executed by Generals MacArthur and Wainwright. The Nipponese now have the Philippines, but in the meantime Australia has been fortified and manned so effectively that this continent will become the springboard for the offensive that will drive the Jap back to his lair, defeated, his factories and his cities in ruins, his future little better than the canine to which his face bears striking resemblance.

More than 40,000 American and Filipino troops were captured by the invader in the Philippines, including probably a score of generals. Their liberation from the hands of the barbarians who hold them prisoner at the earliest moment possible should be the goal of every American. This can be accomplished only by the utter defeat of Nippon, and that will require huge armed forces and planes, ships, tanks and guns in endless array.

As long as 40,000 Americans are being held captive by a tribe of savage rats, no American can call himself free.

A System That Is Manifestly Unfair

THE HOUSE MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE has approved a bill prohibiting the commissioning of inexperienced men in the army. The committee has got something there.

The bill as introduced by Democratic Representative Charles I. Faddis, of Pennsylvania, would prohibit the commissioning of civilians unless they had completed a satisfactory officers' training course.

Representative Faddis says that the system of reaching into civilian life and putting inexperienced men suddenly into officers' uniforms is "fast approaching a national scandal."

Regardless of whether it is as bad as that, the system certainly has its drawbacks. The army wants the services of many men with executive experience in civil life, but handing such men commissions is unfair to officers who had to work for their commissions.

It is also unfair to the thousands of men who have enlisted in the army or been inducted—they have to work their way up if they want commissions. It is hardly conducive to morale for them to see men from civilian life, no matter how talented, suddenly leap over their heads into officers' uniforms.

The army's use of civilian brains in any capacity in which they can benefit the war effort must be heartily approved, but some modifications of the present system of handing out sudden commissions appears advisable.

A fight on the Faddis proposal has already begun in the House. That is as it should be. Perhaps out of the arguments will come a workable plan for putting civilian talent to military use without exposing the system to accusations of unfairness, discrimination or pull.

The War Is Coming Closer Home to Us

THE LONG LIST of civilian products made of iron and steel to be banned from production as announced by the War Production Board is a sharp reminder of the altered life Americans are to undergo for the sake of the war program. The order will curtail the manufacture of a great variety of consumers' goods, ranging from carving set holders to door knobs, from butter knives to parking meters.

The impact of the order will be felt more by industry than by the average consumer, as the latter can fairly well get along without many of them and in many others utilitarian substitutes of other materials can be obtained or used.

A cursory glance over the long list reveals, for example, the banning of such things as asparagus tongs, cake cutters, cheese dishes, egg slicers, dinner bells, finger bowls, napkin rings, menu holders and so on. There are quite a number of these things we can give up without much inconvenience. The dinner bell, for example. The most of us will be there, bell or no bell.

Some of the articles and gadgets will cause a chill to run down the backs of some at first glance. Beer kegs are out, for instance, and—hold your breath, fellows—ice cube trays. Allowance is made, however, for the continued manufacture of wooden beer kegs along with necessary metal fittings, so that is not so terrible. As for the ice cube trays, that's getting next to where it will hurt. The appropriate advice here is for all to be exceedingly careful with those on hand. Being metal, however, they are likely to last over the emergency.

Motorists who have been operating their cars have doubtless been worried over what might happen should the cars develop trouble requiring parts, but it seems they are to have some leeway. The lists refers to accessories and "non-functional" parts, except as required by law. That seems to indicate that functional and other essential parts will be available but that all the gadgets are to be out.

The ban will have a far-reaching effect upon both manufacturers and consumers, as thousands of plants are affected as is the entire consumer goods distributing system of the country.

But, we can all take it. We can and must remember that the common good puts the war needs first. And maybe we shall not be so bad off as some have feared. Leon Henderson, price administrator, says, for example, that the national level of living will be forced down within the next twelve to fifteen months to the low standard of 1932, even though the people will have enough money for the highest standard of living in history. Well, we managed to get through that tough spot of 1932 some way or other even though the most of us had the skin taken off and if it will be no worse than that and we can carry on to victory and a stable peace, we shall be able to consider ourselves lucky.

A Threat and A Challenge

FROM THE DEPTH of conquered France comes a message of hope and confidence and a threat that some day the conquerors will be overthrown.

The message comes from workers who belonged to once powerful but now suppressed French labor organizations. Through secret channels it reached Free French headquarters in London.

The message tells of the plight of the French workers—plunged and exploited by a pitiless enemy and betrayed by "the most contemptible man in France," Pierre Laval. It tells of dead liberties, low wages and scarcity of food. But it does not ask for pity.

"We are not the accomplices of betrayal," the message says. "By force and by menace of starvation we are made to work for Germany. We place our trust in you, comrades, who are working for our liberation, you who are making the planes, tanks, ships and weapons of victory."

"We will go to any length to help you. We will sabotage work for the enemy as far as we possibly can. We will stand up to the justifiable bombings of the factories that work for Germany and we will follow any watchwords that you may be able to get through to us."

"In reality, France is still in the war. The representative of the people of France, Gen. de Gaulle, is fighting with the Allies. His army is small, but an immense captive army is in France behind him."

"The enemy may not have always enough chains to prevent it from flooding over."

There is the threat. It is a challenge to which the workers of America and Britain must make a thunderous response through the muzzles of the weapons of victory.

Consumer income for 1942 will total $111,000,000,000, it is estimated. Tax bill drafters in Congress should bear in mind that this is all there is.

"I Went Up First Class"

By MARSHALL MASLIN

There are little rooms in San Quentin Prison where dead men lived. Into those rooms the guards take men who—in a few short days—will be put to death. The men wait there, joking with each other, rasping at each other, wondering if there is "any chance" living over and over again the events that led them to this place, trying NOT to live in advance the slowly shuffling day of their deaths. They live like that, looking up eagerly at every opening door, and finally they reach a day when they give up hope.

Then they write words on the walls of their cells, messages to men they will never meet. If ever you go to San Quentin you may see those pathetic messages, although I have heard they have been erased. Some are fearful—"Save my soul." Some are friendly—"Good-bye Dick, Jim and Tom." Some are in foreign languages, most of them are in English. All but one or two of those messages that I saw were written by men who died soon. Few were pardoned or reprieved to live out their lives in prison.

But here's what I noticed most of all in those words on the wall.

Again and again I read: "I went up first class." I do not know precisely what is meant by "FIRST CLASS." I suppose it means that the condemned man intended to eat heartily on the morning of his death, smoke a cigarette and walk steadily out the door and up the stairs in the scaffold or to the gas chamber, "pale but outwardly calm." They wanted to be brave on the day of their execution, and they wanted other men to know that in THIS cell there lived for a little while a man who "went up first class."

Those little rooms where ruined men, now dead, have lived are powerfully moving to me. Their messages are like the messages all of us would write on the walls of life.

We are not so different. We too as far as I can see want to go up first class. We want men and women we have never seen, as our friends as well to know we went up first class. We want to atone for our mistakes by doing something first class, at the end. We have done many stupidities, but we want to do at least ONE wise or brave thing before we die.

Censorship Puts End to Arguments On Gas Rationing

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 7.—On the brink of gas rationing, the Ickes petroleum co-ordinator's headquarters has initiated a complete censorship of figures which would show how much rationing is justified.

As far back as January 1, the Ickes office shut off usual weekly regional figures by the Bureau of Mines of its own interior department.

But now it has requested the American Petroleum Institute to abandon its weekly statistics, such as published in this column April 27, showing gas stocks on the eastern seaboard only three-twentieths below last year for the week ending April 11. That is the last weekly figure you will get. API has acceded to the request.

Neither the army nor navy requested such censorship. The armed forces obviously do not consider the figures military information. Nor has action been suggested by Censor Price.

Comfort for Hitler Seen

The Ickes office says it decided itself that Hitler might get some comfort out of knowing how much gas is on hand in the east or elsewhere. It might have added that the co-ordinator's office might get some discomfort from publishing the figures after rationing goes into effect.

Thus only such generalized totals of oil reserves—not broken down as to regions or types—is likely to be available hereafter, and all arguments as to how much rationing is justified must cease.

The Ickes office will merely certify to Defense Transportation Director Joseph Eastman hereafter the amount of fuel it considers available for consumption and Mr. Eastman will tell Leon Henderson how to ration it out—and no one will be in a position to say them nay.

Tough on Teachers

The rationing system is so complex in itself, it will certainly cause prematurely gray hair among the school teachers who will handle it as they are handling sugar. Five types of cards will be issued.

Every motorist who has a registration certificate will get an "A" card, allowing seven units for the emergency period of six weeks between May 15 and July 1. How much each unit will amount to in gallons will be determined May 10. If a unit is to be only three gallons, as some say, an "A" cardholder would get only three and one-half gallons a week.

"B" cards will, like vitamins, have several classifications. "B-1" will get eleven units, "B-2", fifteen and "B-3", nineteen. You can get a "B" card if you can prove you need your car to go to and from work or use it in your work and cannot otherwise get around. The distance will determine whether you will be "B-1", "B-2" or "B-3."

Commercial Exempt

The fifth card will be "X", for unlimited supply to doctors, nurses, ambulances, etc. Commercial vehicles, like buses or delivery trucks will not need a card and will get all they want.

This means the "A" cardholders are only going to get what is left after the commercials and the "X" and "B" boys get theirs. The government does not guarantee any to an "A" cardholder, as Mr. Henderson has officially pointed out.

The school teachers will act as judge and jury in each case. Their instructions are to be liberal in accepting motorists' claims, but it might be well for you to bring along an aspirin in case the lady has had a trying day in the classroom.

Guarantee after July 1

After July 1, when a permanent plan will go into effect, the govern-

FOR CIVILIAN SKILL

Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson is shown as he testified before the House Military Affairs committee against the amendment of Rep. Faddis (Pa.), which would prohibit giving civilians army commissions unless they had previous military training. Patterson stated that it was often necessary to get trained men who were too old for the last war but who were now needed for various types of jobs which requires a high grade of civilian skill.

Union Maintenance Policy Is Expected To Become an Issue at Fall Elections

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Maintenance of membership in labor unions with government coercion as the club is gradually becoming an administration policy that may develop into a political issue at the autumn elections.

To compel workers in America—nearly 10,000,000 of whom are now unionized—to remain members of unions and to compel employers to deduct the dues from payrolls just as the government itself collects payroll taxes means an assurance of financial stability to the unions that they could not possibly achieve by their own efforts.

This alliance of the administration and the office-holding executives of the unions and the organizers, who also benefit financially by the virtual guarantee of income by the government, cannot fail to be reflected in the political lineup. Maintenance of memberships for the unions means maintenance of New Deal votes.

Nothing Wrong Seen

Attorney General Biddle sees nothing wrong in an alliance between the labor unions and the government in politics and has said so in his public speeches, and it may be assumed that he is speaking in behalf of the New Deal.

The alliance is, of course, operating in other directions, too. There seems to be a synchronization of attacks from the administration on business concerns at the very time that important labor union demands are being made on the same corporations.

Thus at a time when the War Labor Board is examining demands from the United Automobile Workers a public smear against General Motors Corporation as a whole is issued by the War Production Board. The corporation, in the period of confusion last January when auto production was being curtailed and stopped, was guilty of technical violations in a small part of its operation. But the incident is being used to attack the attitude of the General Motors Corporation as a whole.

Blast Is Issued

Thus when Messrs. Thomas and Reuters, of the auto workers union, found the General Motors Corporation was not ready to accept their demand for continued payment of double time on Sundays and holidays—something incidentally which has been declared taboo by President Roosevelt—the union officials issued a blast as follows:

"Only a few days ago General Motors was found guilty of defying the War Production Board by using critical war materials to manufacture passenger car parts. We do not understand how General Motors gets the idea it is above the government of the United States."

Certainly this is a strange way to describe the refusal of a company to accept a demand which is itself out of harmony with the president's own pronouncement against double time. Certainly the sudden series of attacks on large corporations for minor and technical violations creates a suspicion that there is an effort under way to force all the big companies to accept the demands of the labor politicians or suffer attacks from governmental agencies interested in fostering the labor union-government alliance.

Court Test Seen

The War Labor Board's power to compel maintenance of membership in unions may soon be questioned in the courts by the Inland Steel Company. Reports are current that injunctions may be sought on the ground that maintenance of membership proposals put into employer contracts under duress contradict provisions of the Wagner act, which declares that such agreements discriminating between workers must be voluntary to be lawful.

The War Labor Board has been blazing a trail of union issues in more ways than one. The other day the board introduced shivers of apprehension into industrial establishments by its support of the "check-off" of union dues. The board ruled that "in view of the fact that the company has made voluntary dues deductions for purposes other than social security taxes as required by law," the check-off must be granted by the employer.

Treasury Needs Ruling

It so happened that the company in question once checked off ten cents a week for a social club in one of its plants. Does this mean that employers who are now deducting payments for war bonds for the Treasury on a purely voluntary basis may be creating a precedent for future War Labor Board decisions?

Certainly the Treasury department has an interest in getting a ruling on this point, lest the incident furnish one of a number of arguments for the institution of a payroll deduction authorized by law in what is known as the forced savings plan.

Maryland Farm Musings

By the Extension Service of the University of Maryland

Some vegetable crops grow best during the cool weather of early spring or late fall while others must have warm weather for their best development. For this reason you should study your climate and know the requirements of the particular vegetables you plant, says Walter R. Ballard, Specialist in Horticulture for the Extension Service.

Home owners will be interested in a new folder on home gardening which was recently published by the University of Maryland Extension Service. The publication discusses what kinds of vegetables to plant, when and how to plant them, the best type of soils and how to cope with insects and diseases. Copies may be had free of charge by writing the extension service at College Park.

Attention of tobacco growers is called to a new publication on the control of tobacco bud mold which is available from the extension service at College Park. The publication was written by Dr. E. A. Walker, specialist in plant pathology, and describes the latest methods in spraying and gassing.

Senator Norris Will Leave Void On Capitol Hill

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Washington won't look natural without Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, who won't be a candidate for re-election in November, on the ground that he's too old—81. He isn't the oldest senator, at that. Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, beats him by a couple of years, and he not only isn't retiring but is one of the most fiery solons on Capitol Hill.

Senator Norris, though, says he is old.

In point of service, Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Dakota, is the upper congressional chamber's senior member, with three more years in his present seat than Senator Norris, who began in 1913, has occupied his. Senator Smith's term isn't expiring now, however.

The term of Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader on the solons' floor, is expiring, though, and he's after another one, despite the fact that he's fifth on the list of seniorities at his end of the Capitol building.

Besides Senators Smith and Norris, Senators Kenneth McKellicott, Tennessee, and Hiram W. Johnson, of California, who aren't up for re-election next November, fit in ahead of him.

Capper Will Win

Then, after Senator McNary, comes Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, who is ruling and will win in a walk, it's assumed in Washington, if sunflowers still bloom in his home state. Next following Senator Capper is Senator Glass, already referred to.

Thirty-two senators come up at a clatter, but those seven are the veterans.

No, Senator Norris isn't quite the dean of the group in the upper legislative branch. Nevertheless, he's served longer in Congress than any other individual for he began with several years in the House of Representatives—all told thirty-nine years.

He started as a Republican but he always was an exceedingly liberal one. When the Republican Progressives developed an organization, he was a charter member of their group. Gradually he became transformed into a 100 percent Progressive, without more than a nominal Republican qualification, and the last time he was elected it was as an out-and-out Independent.

A Net Loss

Yes, indeed, he'll be nonpartisanly missed, as a personality. Plenty of his associates, some of whom didn't endorse all his advanced ideas, would have dissuaded him from retiring if they could, reckoning that he'll be a net loss, regardless of their disagreements with him on certain issues. They hope to see him go back to McCook, Neb., to die, but his mind seems to be made up.

On rather different grounds, Representative George Holden Tinkham's announcement of his refusal to be a candidate again for a seat at the other end of the Capitol, from his Massachusetts district, has attracted a good bit of attention.

Representative Tinkham is picturesque. With his departure congressional color will fade.

No More Whiskers

His Republican political utterances have been good listening to, even by lawmakers who dissented from 'em. But, aside from that, for at least a generation he's sported the only full set of whiskers in the House. There are few whiskers at all today, but those who still wear a modicum of 'em keep 'em under strict control. Representative Tinkham's run absolutely wild. And, between congressional sessions, it was George's regular custom to visit the African wilds, and, personally, shoot lions, tigers and elephants, bringing stuffed fragments of their remains back for the Smithsonian and similar institutions. He may do the same thing in retirement, but it won't have the same pep.

He isn't so very old—a mere 72—but the last census made various changes in the boundaries of his congressional district and he doesn't like 'em.

Unexpected Candidacy

One chap who caused a little surprise by proclaiming his re-election candidacy is Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York. Ham Fish's name, it's hardly needful to remark, has been mentioned copiously in connection with the subversive activities one or two of his subordinates are said to have participated in since the beginning of the present war. Ham hasn't been accused of having had his own hand in 'em, but it surely has been implied that he was careless in not spotting 'em, if they were shimmering, as charged before various investigators and grand juries, including an indictment or so.

Well, he says he's going to run, again. If he's re-elected, it'll be a vindication for him, but it scarcely was expected he'd take the chance.

Factographs

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—
Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sensations shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Hood College Plans Annual Festivities

FREDERICK, Md., May 7 (AP)—Dorothy Lynam of Johnstown, Pa., will be crowned May queen at the annual Hood college festivities next Saturday.

The queen will be crowned by Margery Taylor, of Cheltenham, Pa., representing Prince Hood. Gertrude Garman, of Baltimore, will be maid of honor and Gloria Schmitt, of Pittsburgh, best man to the prince.

Activities will begin with a traditional father-daughter baseball game in the morning. An annual horse show, with beginning, intermediate and advanced riding classes competing for ribbon, will precede the coronation ceremony.

Jane Simon, retiring president of the athletic association, and Marion Grieb, incoming president, alternate winners of the cup for the college's best rider, will ride against each other again this year.

A dance Saturday evening will conclude the affair. Mary Penny-packer of Haddonfield, N. J., is general chairman of the May day.

Beaverbrook Again Asks Second Front

LONDON, Thursday, May 7 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook in an interview appearing in the News Chronicle today renewed demands for opening a second front against the Axis and said he was taking the hopeful view that "in due course it will become a reality."

"A second front is of course the business of the general staff," the publisher and former cabinet member said. "They know where to strike and there is plenty of room for choice. A 2,000-mile coastline, for instance, for a seaborne invasion; half a dozen captive countries

Seven Officials Favor Seizure of All Speeding Cars

Also Approve Legislation for Federal Requisition- ing of Autos

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP)—Seven government officials are reported to have urged the Senate Military committee to approve legislation authorizing federal requisitioning of private automobiles and seizure of cars whose owners are convicted of driving more than forty miles an hour.

The seven appeared at a closed session of the committee, but Chairman Reynolds (D-NC) related some of their testimony to reporters. He quoted them as saying the shortage of rubber had become critical from a military standpoint.

Predicting that the committee would approve the pending legislation, Reynolds said the government was faced with the necessity of taking "every ounce of rubber not being used in war or essential civilian activities."

May Requisition Tires

This might result, Reynolds said, in the requisitioning of all tires over five for any one car, a procedure which the government would be permitted to follow under terms of the auto seizure bill which was introduced by Senator Downey (D-Calif.).

The seven officials who appeared before the committee were Price Administrator Leon Henderson, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Deputy Petroleum Coordinator Ralph K. Davies, Director of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman, Budget Director Harold Smith, Arthur B. Newhall, deputy director of the purchasing division of the war production board, and F. Eberstadt, chairman of the army and navy munitions board.

Reynolds said their testimony disclosed that "the most critical need in America today is rubber and our enemies know it." He stressed the fact that this was a military need, adding that civilians could hope to get no new tires from synthetic rubber production.

Those who have tires now are going to be able to keep them in most cases, he said.

Wants Congress to Act

Although Henderson was reported to have intimated to the committee that he had sufficient authority at present to commandeer autos and tires, he and other witnesses were said to have urged passage of the authorization bill by Congress for its psychological effect.

Senator Hill (D-Ala.) said it was made plain that the government did not now intend to take away a citizen's car unless the public failed to curb unnecessary driving or failed to maintain the low speeds which would conserve tires.

Two bills now are under consideration by the committee, but Reynolds said they might be combined.

The Downey bill would authorize expenditures, under the direction of the present, of up to $5,000,000,000 for the acquisition by the government of a stock pile of automobiles and parts.

The other measure, introduced by Reynolds, provides for seizing the auto of any person convicted of violating a proposed national speed limit of forty miles an hour.

The average work week for employees in manufacturing industries in this country is now 41.5 hours. In Germany the work week averages at least sixty hours. In Japan the average is about seventy hours.

SYNOPSIS

Three young airline hostesses, TIBBY LANE, sweet and astute; STEENA WINTERS, beautiful and sophisticated; and MARY BAKER, plain, sturdy and direct, share an apartment together in New York, where they are based. A friend of Tibby's, TOMMY DARE, is spending his first year out of medical school at a clinic in Brooklyn. Steena sets her cap for WAYNE COURTRIGHT, wealthy official of the airline.

YESTERDAY: Steena comes home and finds Tibby and Tommy waiting for news of the downed plane on which Mary was hostess.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

THERE WAS no denying now that there was tension in the little apartment, but it was the tension of anxiety. Waiting in a chair, a strain, so that now, although there were three of them to share it—Tommy, Steena and Tibby—it was not lightened.

After a while, Steena said she believed she would change, if they would excuse her a few minutes. This last with one of her rare smiles for the young doctor. "I'm never comfortable in uniform," she explained. "Somehow I don't feel like a woman."

Tibby wondered how she could care how she felt or how she looked when Mary was in such grave danger, but were Steena herself in a crack-up she probably would be concerned as to her appearance. It was not due to heartlessness on Steena's part; it was just the fastidiousness that went with being so beautiful.

Steena had looked attractive enough in her uniform—womanly enough, too—but when she reappeared, wearing a lovely satin housecoat of sea green, a matching ribbon in her gorgeous hair, it was easy to see what she had meant by her remark, for now she looked positively alluring.

Had she gotten herself up like that just for Tommy? Tibby wondered. And then was ashamed at such a shoddy thought. Steena could not have helped spreading her feathers, like a peacock, had the only male in the vicinity been the janitor.

Nevertheless, the effect was not wasted on Dr. Dare, as was quite evident from the way his eyes approved the change in costume. He even said, "I don't like women in uniforms, either. I quite agree with you, Steena, that there's something well, mannish about the best of them." "Not," he added with that gallantry that Tibby had noted he always brought out for Steena's benefit, "that you—or Tibby—could ever be mistaken for a man."

He got another smile from Steena for this, but Tibby did not think this was the time for fancy speeches. Besides, he had included her only to be polite. She said, "Suppose I make some coffee?" That would help put in this dreadful waiting. It might help them to keep awake, for soon it would be midnight. It must have been around nine-thirty, a quarter of ten maybe, when they had heard that first news flash. Two or three hours ago—surely something more would be heard soon. Without doubt the plane's radio had been put out of use in that forced landing, but rescue ships had started out at once. "That's a good idea," Steena settled herself and the wide spread of her shimmering green gown, in a low chair, tilting back her lovely head, as if suddenly weary. "I could do with some coffee. This publicity business isn't all it's cracked out to be. I had to stand for HOURS. And those lights they focus on you hit you right in the eye and practically blind you, besides giving off so much heat that you sizzle as well—it's really hard work, posing."

Young Dr. Dare said he imagined it would be, although his tone seemed to indicate that he considered that sort of thing more suitable for a girl than flying. Tibby supposed it was not all fun, but she knew that Steena got a big kick out of doing it, since it was, as Mary had said, right up her alley. Steena always remembered she was tired if there was anything to be done in the way of household duties, although maybe that was a low dig, too. Tibby conceded as she made the coffee, unassisted, and raised the icebox to see what she could find to offer with it.

When you were a great beauty, as Mary said, you did not have to be useful. Oh, why would she keep thinking of all the things Mary said—her dear, funny way of putting them so straight and pat. What if she never could say them any more . . . what if Mary had been seriously hurt—or worse? People were not usually just injured in a crack-up. They were much more likely to be killed outright, as Tibby was too well aware. Or in this case drowned, or dead—when found—from exposure.

"No phone call yet?" she asked, coming back into the living room, bearing the tray with cups and saucers and a plate of hastily-concocted sandwiches. She did not see how she could go on like this much longer. Not knowing was almost worse than knowing the worst—if it had to be that.

Steena shook her head. Tommy jumped up, looking rather guilty because he had just been grinning widely at something Steena had said, so that now, seeing Tibby's white face and hearing the anxiety in her voice, he did feel guilty. "I could phone Wayne," Steena suggested. "Of course I know he dislikes being called at his office. But this is different. And he says it depends, too, upon WHO calls him." Her tone held assurance that a call from her never would be unwelcome.

Tommy still could not get this other man placed. Was he a friend of Tibby's—that goodby scene had registered friendship, the way he had held Tibby's hand and gazed down into her eyes—yet from other hints that had got into the open he appeared to be more a friend of Steena's.

Tibby said, "I don't believe I would—if I were you. I know he will phone just as soon as there is any news."

She said it so quietly, yet so positively, that Steena glanced at her sharply.

"Was Wayne here long?" she inquired.

"Not very." He had been there about an hour, although at the time it had seemed longer, with Tibby wondering how she would explain to Steena his being there at all, an explanation that seemed unnecessary now.

"He surely seemed at home—and as if he intended staying on forever," Tommy gave his version.

"But he must have known I wouldn't be back until late," Steena said, her green eyes still shrewd and thoughtful. What was more important, Wayne must have known that Steena would not be home at all! All publicity calls came direct from his office.

Tibby did not offer any comment on this—or the other unasked questions in Steena's eyes. She was, of course, occupied in pouring and serving the coffee.

"He surely acted as if he hated to tear himself away—in spite of his rush," Tommy continued to present the picture as it had appeared to him—and to make matters worse, instead of better, according to Tibby's way of seeing it. "Who is he, anyway, besides a big shot in the company?" Now he would get this man placed once and for all.

"He's a VERY special friend of mine," Steena enlightened him, with a note of emphasis which, no doubt, was a reminder to Tibby that she was the one who was not supposed to forget who Wayne Courtright was. "He's THE Wayne Courtright, famous flyer—I suppose you know he's giving Tibby lessons—millionaire, man about—"

"Lessons!" Tommy was learning a thing or two, but not what he had expected. "Yes, although why anyone should want to learn to fly is more than I can understand. When there's no REASON, I mean." Steena modified her flat statement. "Unless you own your own plane, for instance." Or unless a person had some ulterior motive, she might have added.

Tibby answered this unasked question. "Couldn't you want to learn just for the fun of it? For the wonderful sense of power and freedom?"

So she was learning to fly! Tommy thought Tib might have told him. But before anyone could say more, the phone rang. Both Steena and Tibby reached for it.

TODAY'S VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

By Dean Holliday

GUARD AGAINST BEETLES IN VICTORY GARDENS

If you enjoy fresh, crisp cucumbers from your own garden, protect the seedling plants early against cucumber beetles.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, you can identify this yellow beetle by its black stripe wings. The cucumber beetle eats the tender shoots and leaves of the young cucumber vine and, as they chew, they infect the plants with bacterial wilt. The beetles carry the spores of this wilt on their backs.

To prevent this wilt, spray the plants with Bordeaux mixture or dust with rotenone or activated pyrethrum. The rotenone will also control the beetles.

If you discover that one of your cucumber plants has the "wilt," destroy it at once to keep the disease from spreading to other vines.

The four-day registration of Allegheny county residents for sugar rationing books was concluded yesterday in forty-two elementary schools and a tabulation last evening showed that a total of 16,267 books were issued on the final day.

Tuesday was the biggest day of the registration when 30,604 applications were received and 29,786 books were issued.

Those who failed to register during the four days must wait two weeks before getting their books by making application to the local rationing board instead of the public schools.

Democracy Will

if that will advance the country. Illiteracy has been smashed in Russia and the terrific fight the Red army is putting up against Hitler's hordes is a result of superb morale and an abundance of manpower, Davis asserted.

The same thing is true of China where the people have been fighting the sinister Japanese for five years because they believe they will emerge to a better world after victory comes.

Davis said he has great sympathy for the present generation of young men and women as they have nothing to look forward to while a guilty world is fighting as a result of its failure to give its people social advances along with technological advances.

When too much economical and social privilege is vested in a few persons or nations the inexorable law of revolt will ensue as this is out of line with the moral law of decency between men and nations.

Japan is now on the same path which England followed in building up her colonial empire and she is using the greatest of all aggression against decency—and that is war.

Even after the United Nations are victorious Fascism and Nazism will remain in Germany, Italy and Japan and the extension of democracy to these people is essential if we are to prevent a recurrence of war.

Fascism Wrecks Italy
Fascism in Italy has "shot that country back 50 years," Davis said. We here in America must guard against inflation so that we do not have to undergo economic paralysis which may lead to Fascism in one form or another, Davis warned.

If the United States lives up to its pledge of the Four Freedoms and aids the peoples of China, India, Asia and other peonage countries, prospects of democracy spreading over the world are excellent, Davis said.

In ending his lecture Davis was optimistic over the chances for a better world after the war as leaders of the world are beginning to see the light and will probably enter into a brotherhood of man, and nations, so that all can live as God intended human beings to do so.

Companies Meet Tonight

THE DAILY STORY

SOW'S EAR

It Was Hard to Understand Why Men Went for a Type Like Tina—until You Saw Tina in Action

By MIMI DAYTON

She was the kind of roommate who was taking her master's in anthropology or economics and adolescent psychology when you'd fuss with Tina for hours but wanted to cut for a coke in the her light brown hair was too fine

Coffee Shop. She was the kind of girl that every boy's mother hopes that Johnnie will bring home someday. She was serious, intelligent, polite, she could cook a sow's ear and she was my roommate. And she never in the whole of her 19 serious years had an official date. . . . We used to get her blind to hold a curl and she looked positively upholstered if she wore anything but taffeta or organdy. She was just that sticky caramel type in clothes. She had nice eyes and a straight nose and when she was little she had had to wear braces on her teeth. So we'd doubledate and drive to Wash Prom or to the B. J. Winter formal, and Tina and her economics major would sit stiffly in the back seat and solemnly discuss world conditions. Sometimes if I turned half-way around in my seat and suddenly looked at Tina she looked as if she were going to take down her hair for a good cry.

She hated this sort of thing. She hated getting dressed up and trying to make an impression so that the lug would call again. And when the whole business was over Tina would come home and cry on her pillow and I'd tell her the only reason I had any fun was because I went with Tommy whom I've known for years and after all what did she expect on a first date? That was all right for a while, but Tina soon discovered that first dates were as far as she got, and she began to have conditioned reflexes to canaries, cats and tea.

Then in the middle of winter quarter came the Psi U dinner dance. Tommy and I planned to go and at the last minute (about 5:00 in the afternoon) he came tearing over to the dorms screaming that the president of the Wisconsin house came breezing in suddenly and wanted a date. We called over glamour puss on campus and every last one of them was busy. I hated to mention Tina again to Tommy but Tina was our one last chance. I steamed her, gave her a facial, a manicure and pedicure and I set her hair in cologne. I borrowed Lillian's best black dinner dress. I worked for two hours on her.

Finally they came, Tommy, fresh checked and happy, and the Psi U from Wisconsin. Bob Connaty, blond and briar pipish. He was tall and oh, I don't know, he smiled like an owl and your stomach felt like a bag of feathers, and you kept turning around just to look at the animal and you fairly frothed bright young quips. I even half forgot Tina and I can't remember even speaking to Tommy. But Tina. She couldn't even get started on war news or shipping losses. She sat still and quiet in her corner of the car while Bob and I bantered like mad. She almost looked bored but she gave Bob a few sideling glances and look him over. Next time I turned he was holding her prim little hand and she was still being quiet. When she spoke though her voice stuck warm and fluid in her throat. Sometimes it'd sink to a half whisper and Bob would have to lean way over to hear what she said.

About the fourth time I thought she was overplaying the game, and she was glad to get to the House.

Inside it was warm and crowded. Boys were trailing down the stairs in the dimly lit hallway and off it was a small room which the girls used as a powder room. It was littered with empty green florist's boxes and the green waxed paper was all over the table and floor. There were still a few boxes left on the table so we took two and pinned on the gardenias. Tina breathed, "Isn't he—Isn't he—"

"Well," I interrupted, "I don't see what you two could possibly talk about."

We went out and met the boys and wandered into the lounge. There were heavy leather chairs and couches and an emberish fire in the grate. Tina sank back into a chair and looked at Bob with half-closed eyes. She was pulling my line. Tommy and I danced after while and all I could remember of the whole evening was that beautiful big boy just simply glowing all over the place. Anyhow we got back to the dorms and Tina just sort of fainted through the door and flopped on her bed with a silly smile.

The next afternoon between classes, Tina told me, "I've got a date."

I walked back to the dorms. I was deeply hurt at this breach of friendship. Tommy was sitting in the parlor when I came in. "Hi, honey, I'll be ready in a minute," I greeted him. Tommy, fresh checked, youth, flushed purple. He looked silly and embarrassed.

"Well, Babe, ah, I, ah, really came over to see Tina for a minute."

He pulled at the curtain like a helpup while I went upstairs. This year I'm rooming alone!

'Teen-Age Girls Often Think They Are Mistreated

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous

Every day brings me letters from young girls of 15, 16 and 17 whose parents think they are too young to go on long motor trips with young men or attend public dances.

The girls feel they have been badly treated.

One letter in particular is outstanding. This girl is 16. Her parents are anxious for her to finish high school, at least. They would like her to go through college also, but they don't insist on that. However, they're doing everything in their power to persuade their daughter to complete the high school course, which she can finish in another year and a half.

The girl, only child of a well-to-do family, and probably over-indulged, writes me a letter about her troubles and sufferings, which are nothing more than having to finish her high school education.
She tells me that, in despair, she went to see an old friend who advised her to marry the first man or boy who presented himself as a possible husband, eloping with him if necessary.

Parents Not Unreasonable
Suppose this little girl does find some boy who is foolish enough to elope with her. The chances are that he will be unable to support her, and that their marriage will prove as unsatisfactory as child marriages usually do.

Will this rash counselor then open her doors to them, make them welcome under her roof and give them a place at her table until the young man is able to support a wife? Has she any intention of assuming the responsibility of giving such advice?

Fathers and mothers, as a rule,
are not unreasonable. If normal, they desire above all things that their children shall be happy.
There's nothing unreasonable in parents using their influence to persuade a daughter to take a high school education.

My correspondent tells me she has cried every day about the hardship of having to go to school. If she leaves school at the end of second year high, what educational equipment will she have with which to face the world in case her marriage turns out badly?

A Risky Proposition
As for weeping because she can't go motoring and attend public dances, the parents' objection to this seems to me only reasonable.
If the girl were old enough to take care of herself, that would be different. But sixteen, hungry for excitement and emotionally unstable, is too risky a proposition.
If she marries the first man who comes along, and he proves to be lazy and incapable of earning a living, or is a philanderer, or drinks,
and the marriage winds up in a divorce court, it will be her parents and not the "friend" to whom she will look for support.

Nor can anyone blame the parents for trying to prevent this girl from becoming the victim of her own folly and plunging up for them responsibilities in the way of caring for a daughter, and her possible brood, in their declining years.

Board Announces Results of Fire And Police Tests

17 Men Placed on Eligible List; Valentine Boosts Mark Nine Points

Seventeen men were given ratings for the eligible list of the Police and Fire departments as the result of examinations conducted April 30 in Port Hill high school, it was announced last night following a meeting of the Board of Civil Service Commissioners of the City of Cumberland at city hall.

Eight men were placed on the police eligible list while the Fire department list contained nine names.

Valentine Ups Rating
Arthur V. Hast and Ernest Powell, who were on the former police eligible list, registered but did not take the examination. They retained their former averages. William E. Valentine, however, decided to take the examination in an effort to better his rating and succeeded in boosting it nine percentage points.

Philip H. Smith, Victor C. Long and John G. Kreitzburg registered for the firemen's eligible list and retained their former rating.

After the papers were examined and graded last evening the board, comprising C. Philip Jolley, chairman, H. Clifford Spiker and Jesse W. Korns, with Samuel E. Grimmer as secretary, announced that the following eligible list, according to the averages made by the men, will be submitted to James Orr, police and fire commissioner.

List of Eligibles
Police — Charles C. Sullivan, 304 Magruder street; Arthur V. Hast, 811 Columbia avenue; George S. Hansrote, 29 Weber street; William E. Valentine, 314 Furnace street; Fred A. Pfeiffer, 735 Maryland avenue; Ernest M. Powell, 208 Union street; James A. Kuhlman, 414 Warwick avenue, and Guy E. Williams, 45 Roberts street.

Fire — Philip H. Smith, 20 Euclid place; Loman E. Bennett, 29 Fifth street; Robert Leo Reichert, 154 Bedford street; Hillary H. Green, 805 Elmwood Lane; Ervin W. Lease, 611 Miller avenue; William M. Hartung, 824 Shade's lane; Victor C. Long, 439 Bond street; John G. Kreitzburg, 206 Pear street and Joseph A. Soethe, 630 Bedford street.

Two More Baker

state contends was a "dummy" corporation owned, controlled and managed by Baker for his own ends.

Already Mortgaged to Hilt

The value of the mortgaged property was $9,000 at the most, state witnesses said, and first and second mortgages already on it aggregated $9,700, in addition to a considerable sum charged against it for taxes in arrears, which would be another prior lien. In short, the state said, Baker converted the money for his own purposes instead of investing it in a first mortgage as he was instructed to do by his client.

Baker never recorded the mortgage in behalf of Mrs. Beckley, nor did he assign insurance on the property to protect her lien, according to uncontradicted testimony.

Although denying that the wisdom of the investment was material to the issue, the defense introduced testimony, through Baker and other witnesses, seeking to show that the $3,500 third mortgage on the property was not worthless.

Two Hagerstown realty men, Grover C. Criley and John L. Swain, took the stand on behalf of the defense to testify that the property in question had a value of between $11,000 and $12,000. Criley, secretary of a building and loan company, placed the figure at $12,000, while Swain, a real estate dealer, estimated the value to be $11,000.

Testimony Is Conflicting

This testimony was in conflict with that offered for the prosecution by Charles F. Strode, Hagerstown realtor who built the house. Strode said its top value was $9,000, now or in July, 1941, when Baker invested Mrs. Beckley's $3,500 in a third mortgage on it.

As he had in the previous cases, Baker took the stand in his own behalf and was the principal defense witness. His chief contention was that the investment was a "safe" one and that Mrs. Beckley "would not lose a penny."

Asserting that his original intention was to invest the money in a first mortgage, the defendant, without explaining why he changed his mind, said that he decided to put it in the third mortgage because he felt the property was "amply worth" an amount sufficient to cover it. "And I still think so," he said.

On cross-examination, State Attorney Wagonman, after repeated questions, finally elicited from the defendant the admission that he had deposited the $1,175 and later the $2,325 in his personal bank account and had checked out the money in the regular course of his business. At this point, Wagonman told the court he didn't know why the case was being tried in view of this admission.

Argument Ensues

"What do you want us to do, withdraw our plea of not guilty and plead guilty?" Weinberg asked. Wagonman indicated that he thought this was the proper course, and a heated argument followed, ended when the court directed them to proceed with the trial.

Baker, obviously worn by the four-day ordeal, also admitted that he failed to tell Mrs. Beckley that he was going to invest the money in a third mortgage. He told her it was a "safe" investment, he said, adding that he didn't think it necessary to explain his change of mind.

The defendant said he didn't recall whether he had assigned the insurance on the property to protect Mrs. Beckley's lien and was unable to give any explanation of his failure to record the mortgage.

It was apparent yesterday that the tempers of counsel had been frayed by the wearying series of trial, and there were frequent sharp clashes between Wagonman and Weinberg. After one particular bitter exchange, in which Weinberg said he would "kill" Wagonman, a statement for which he immediately apologized, Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan suggested that the attorneys "turn off the heat."

The strain was telling on the defendant, too, and more than once he showed his anger at questions put to him relentlessly by the state's attorney on cross-examination.

Selective Industrials Advance In Brisk Recovery of Market

British Successes in Madagascar Aid in Price Recovery

By BERNARD S. O'HARA

NEW YORK, May 7 (AP)—The stock market did a quick comeback today, after yesterday's slight stumble, with selected industrials advancing fractions to more than a point.

Encouraging from a brokerage slant was the volume, while still under a paving figure, was the best in more than a week. Transfers of 343,250 shares were the largest since April 29 and compared with 267,890 Wednesday.

Forward leanings predominated at the start. Prices, highest around mid-day, retreated here and there after noon and closing trends for most favorites were under the top.

Analysts attributed the resumption of the swing partly to the persistent belief the market still was overvalued. Mild inspiration was derived from reported British success at Madagascar.

Among New York's highs were those of Chrysler, Postal Telegraph, preferred and Colgate-Palmolive, Curtiss-Wright, on the other hand, slipped to new low ground for 1942.

Ending on the upside were Bethlehem, General Motors, Standard Oil (N.J.), Texas Co., International Harvester, J. I. Case, Westinghouse, du Pont, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville and J. C. Penney.

Santa Fe and N. Y. Central were unchanged while Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania and Southern Railway were up a shade.

On the losing side were American Telephone, Great Northern, American Airlines, Pan-American Airways, Deere, Public Service of N. J., Philip Morris and Anaconda.

Tilting forward in the curb were Aluminum of America, Humble Oil, American Cyanamid, Singer Mfg. and National Sugar Refining. In arrears were Hartford Electric, Colts Patent Firearms, Brewster Aero and Pioneer Gold. Turnover here aggregated 50,517 shares versus 44,335 the day before.

Selected Rails, Utilities and Foreign Dollar bonds rose fractions to more than a point in the bond market.

Sales aggregating $7,964,400, par value, against $6,573,000 on Wednesday. Turnover in excess of $100,000 and gains of major fractions to more than a point featured in International Telephone 4½ and 5½, Denver, Rio Grande & Western collateral 4½, Southern Pacific

"Legion of Death" Is Being Formed in Garrett County

Members Promise To Meet Invader At Sea Shore

Will Oppose the Enemy as Long as One Person Remains Alive

OAKLAND, Md., May 7 (P)—Garrett county men who enrolled in the last draft registration are determined they will meet any invader of the country at the coastline and give their lives, if necessary, to keep America free.

Dr. W. B. Love, a retired Presbyterian minister of Mountain Lake Park, said today to bear out this determination a number of the men were forming a "legion of death" to engage the enemy at the seashore and to fight as long as one of them remained alive.

He explained the formation of such an organization was conceived by a number of men who congregated around schools at the last registration. Dr. Love put the thoughts of the men into concrete form.

Movement Takes Root
Already the movement had taken root and a number of men had signed a pledge drawn up by him. Dr. Love, a veteran of the first World war, announced.

Intended for enrollees of the last registration and other men too old for actual combat service, the pledge declares that "rejoicing in our heritage, liberty and prosperity beyond anything the world has ever known, we would bequeath to our posterity a legacy no less glorious."

It contends that the young men of the country are facing the foe, stopping him in his tracks and dying with smiles on their faces, but that they are outplanned, outmaneuvered and outmanned.

"We have every confidence in their ability and their devotion, and we will guard their homes until they return, and stamp out every subversive move that would undermine our government."

"But should the worst come upon us, should the unexpected come to pass, should unholy feet approach our shores, should America be endangered, should the sanctity of our homes be threatened, we will never submit to that tragedy, or bow beneath the tyrant's rod."

Will Not Live in Slavery
"We, therefore, pledge ourselves to form a 'legion of death' to meet the invaders at the coast, with a banner over us 'thou shalt not pass.' And so long as one remains alive we will swell the chorus of our fathers: 'He hath sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat.'"

"We do not intend to live in slavery under a Hitler, a Mussolini or a Jap."

Dr. Love believes that at least 1,000 county men will join the movement. He feels also that others in America who see their activity drawing to a close, would be enthusiastic to make the same covenant that these Garrett county mountaineer fighters are about to do.

Old West Is Preserved for Films

Like other relics of American history—the first steamboat, the first electric light—a large slice of the old west is today being preserved in its original state in a sprawling outdoor "museum."

Little known to the outside world, the "museum" comprises several hundred acres of magnificent scenery, massive rocks, rolling plains, endless sagebrush and sand. Hidden in the hills north of Hollywood it remains almost untouched since the Indians and pioneer scouts fought for control of the far west.

When Joe E. Brown began work on Columbia's new western, comedy "Shut My Big Mouth," now at the Embassy theater, with Adele Mara, Victor Jory and Joan Woodbury, the studio location manager immediately reserved the ranch as a picture location.

Although Iverson enforces the rule that film companies must do no damage to landscape or vegetation, he takes special pains to give them helpful service. He has a sprinkling wagon to keep down the dust from racing horses that might fog the camera lens, and there are Indian villages, pueblos, dome huts and wigwams which they may use to their heart's content.

Mature's Fan Mail Hits Salary Like Taxes

Those salaries stars get aren't all velvet. In fact they aren't even all

That's because a star is in the public eye and there is a certain premium on being one of the most popular guys in the country. Victor Mature has found that popularity is to a salary something more awesome than taxes are to a salary.

A goodly chunk of his wages for his latest film for Twentieth Century-Fox, Theodore Dreiser's "My Gal Sal," in technicolor, goes just for fan mail, he revealed. He says it's one expense he's thrilled to pay, only he'd give anything if he could only answer by carrier pigeon or seagull.

"My Gal Sal" stars Rita Hayworth, Victor Mature, John Sutton and Carole Landis. Its featured cast includes James Gleason, Phil Silvers, Walter Catlett, Mona Maris, and Frank Orth. Irving Cummings directed the feature which comes to the Strand theater tomorrow.

Janel Blair Sees Dream Come True

When Janel Blair was a singer with Hal Kemp's orchestra, she used to sing numbers composed by boys in play in Kemp's band.

MAN OF PEACE

Anton Walbrook, as a religious man of peace, a Hutterite farmer in Canada, is featured in Columbia's dramatic "The Invaders" starting Sunday at the Maryland theater, with Laurence Olivier, Leslie Howard and Raymond Massey co-starred.

in the band and wish she had a music publishing company in order to get them a break.

Miss Blair, who is now a screen leading lady by virtue of her role opposite Pat O'Brien and Brian Donlevy in Columbia's hilarious "Two Yanks in Trinidad," now at the Maryland theater, is now in a position to carry out that wish.

Janet now owns an interest in a Los Angeles music publishing company. She bought it on the advice of her agent, who figured that her name as a singer and actress would lend prestige to the house.

Although she takes no active part in the business, Miss Blair is able to help out the boys who used to sing numbers composed by boys in play in Kemp's band.

Jack Carson Finally Wins Girl in Movies

After all these years of courtship, Jack Carson, who has lost more pretty girls than Errol Flynn has won, and has made a career out of not marrying the leading lady, comes off successfully in a screen romance.

To date this large young man, favorably known to many moviegoers as "The All-American Heel," has lost Ginger Rogers six times (an all-time record for heartbreak). Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Myrna Loy and other lovelies.

Jack now sees his luck turning.

In Warner Bros.' "Larceny, Inc." which is being shown at the Liberty, he gets Jane Wyman.

In the story, Carson, a leather-goods salesman, proposes to Jane, daughter of a confidence man, fifteen minutes after he meets her.

"This," he said solemnly, "is undoubtedly a turning point in motion picture history."

New Trio Featured In "Road Agent"

"Road Agent," latest in a series of Universal action dramas starring Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine.

Devine comes today to the Garden theater.

The widely varied talents of this newly formed cinema trio are said to be expertly exploited in this colorful story of the old west that deals with a war between cattlemen and desperadoes.

The supporting cast includes such well-known players as Anne Gwynne, Richard Davis, Anne Nagel, John Galloway and Samuel S. Hinds.

In "Road Agent," Foran portrays an undercover agent for an express company sent with his two partners, Carrillo and Devine, to round up a gang of bandits who have been holding up stages carrying gold to the cattlemen of the district.

Richard Arlen and Andy Devine celebrate their twelfth co-starring adventure in Universal's "Mutiny in the Arctic," now playing at the Garden theater.

Facing death on a floating iceberg is the situation experienced by the two stars in the new film.

Wheat is supposed to be a native to the warm Mediterranean. It was grown by the early Egyptians, as it has been found in some of the most ancient Egyptian tombs.

The annual clothing allowance for the individual trainee in the United States Army training camp is $162.05.

There are about 35,000 barbers in New York City.

Giants Continue To Repurchase Former Players

William Leroy Lohrman Is Latest To Be Bought Back by New York

By WHITNEY MARTIN
Wide World Sports Columnist
NEW YORK, May 7 — The New York Giants have been killing more fatted calves than there are in Texas in the last three or four years as the prodigal sons come trooping home.

The latest to heed one of these "Bill; come home; all is forgiven—Mel" personals is William Leroy Lohrman, a pitcher of sorts whom the Giants sent to the St. Louis Cardinals last winter along with catcher Ken O'Dea and several jiggers of cash in exchange for large John Mize.

The Giants now have a pitcher, a shortstop and an outfielder whom the club sent away, and later decided there might have been a slight error, and not on a booted grounder, either. For some reason or other the eliminated gents apparently seemed to look better in another uniform.

Many of Old Club Back
At any rate, with a few more repurchases the Giants will begin to look like the Giants of 1937. Let's see, they finished first that year, so that wouldn't be so bad, at that.

Hank Leiber and Dick Bartell went in the purge of 1938 in that famous "let's do something startling" deal which sent them along with Gus Mancuso, to the Cubs in exchange for Billy Jurges, Frank Demaree and O'Dea.

Bartell traveled around a little before returning to the fold in 1941. He got in a couple of years with Detroit, one of them a championship year. Leiber stayed with the Cubs until he looked furtively around the corner last winter and discovered Bill Terry no longer was around the Polo Grounds as manager. He came galloping back, passing Bob Bowman and some Giant money headed in the other direction.

Just how Horace Stoneham came out financially on these boomerang transactions is known to Horace Stoneham, and after all, it's his own business.

He got Bartell back for nothing, as the Rowdy one had been declared a free agent. He had to put out cash to get Leiber back, after sending him away for players only. He also had to put out cash for the return of Lohrman, and inasmuch as cash went to St. Louis with Lohrman in the first place, it makes the price on Mize come pretty high.

Came up from Baltimore
What the Giants expect of Lohrman is problematical. The big guy has had only one winning season. He came up from Baltimore at the fag end of the 1937 season and won one game. In 1938 he won nine and lost six, but in the last three years he couldn't make the 500 mark. He was with the Cards just long enough to soil his uniform this year, winning one and losing one.

With the recognized potential punch in the Giants lineup this year there is a good chance he may come out on the winning side, although he'll have to whittle down his 4.02 earned run average of 1941 to do it.

It was the general idea that when the Cards took Lohrman in the Mize deal they were taking him as something of a trade-in, with a resale in prospect, as the Cards are knee-deep in pitchers of their own private brand. It hardly was expected, though, that he would bounce right back to where he came from.

However, maybe it can't be classed as hot news when the Giants put out money for a ball player, even if he is a reclaimed job. The news would be if the Cardinals put out money for a player.

Terp Mittmen Can "Also Hit the Books"

COLLEGE PARK, Md., May 7 (AP)—Maryland university's eastern intercollegiate boxing tourney champions are proving they can "hit the books" as well as their ring opponents.

Scholastic figures on the ring squad, not including Len Rodman, heavy, who is a pharmacy school student in Baltimore, show the team members have an average of 2.561 out of a possible four points.

This is said to be above the general average of the student body. Judson Lincoln, Hotsy Alperstein and Jack Gilmore, three of the regulars, boasted three point averages or better for the past semester.

The Preakness Scramble

Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, who has seen more horses run than Daniel Boone ever saw Indians, still calls Saturday's Preakness a wide open race.

With keen eyes that have followed the racing scene for over fifty years, Sunny Jim figures the Preakness and the Kentucky Derby are two different races—different distances, different post positions and a few different horses.

Deep down in his heart, if he had to make a pick, I don't believe he would get far away from Alab, which hasn't won a race all year.

"But he hasn't run a bad race yet," Fitz tell you. "Don't forget that. There are so many three-year-olds which are so well matched. They've been beating one another, and they'll probably keep on beating one another."

The Favorites

As far as one can peer into the future, the Greentree entry with Shut Out and Devil Diver, plus Wayne Wright and Eddie Arcaro, will be the public's selection.

But a large chunk of the betting public also will swing in back of little Alab, figuring the former two-year-old star is about due. After all, Alab wasn't actually three years old until a few days ago, and they are not going to keep whipping him forever. He is too good a horse to keep on running good races and still keep losing.

The Preakness Odds

The top handicappers of the East—those who figure and follow form—rate the Preakness in this order:

Greentree entry—8 to 5.

Alab—3 to 1.

Valdina Orphan—5 to 1.

Requested—7 to 1.

Colchic—7 to 1.

Apache—8 to 1.

The racing condition of both Sun Again and Bleu d'Or has been in doubt.

Favored Entry

There is reason enough to put the Greentree entry on top, even if many of the keener sharpshooters still believe the race is open. Wayne Wright and Shut Out already have proved they were good enough to win the Kentucky Derby, while Arcaro and Devil Diver still are held on at least even terms with that pair.

Devil Diver has drawn another week in which to recover from his Kenelard setback and there will be just as many backing the stable on his account as there will be supporting the Shut Out chance.

There is good reason to make Alab second choice. This running rabbit hasn't won all year, but he hasn't run a bad one—not lately anyway.

He should have been stand-out three-year-old under sorer treatment. In spite of all this, the little bay colt is game enough and fast enough to be a dangerous threat—a horse to be watched. He won't be far away, especially if his position is favorable.

The Pack at Large

Shut Out, Devil Diver and Alab are not the only horses which have a chance in this race.

With better racing luck the crowd will see a big improvement in Requested and Apache. It will get a sturdy effort from Valdina Orphan and it might get a thrill from Colchic, a horse which has beaten Alab twice. Trainer Fitzsimmons will tell you that post positions can mean from two to four lengths in a field of ten or more horses.

Many track followers still believe that Sun Again could have been the top three-year-old if the Calumet traveler hadn't lost at least four training weeks. When he is ready the Warren Wright-Ben Jones star will be something to handle in a big way.

Saturday's Preakness may not have the greatest field that ever went to the post, but it will have one of the most interesting, which is the main idea. It can be a thriller from start to finish with three or four horses head and head at the wire. Racing luck again will play one of the leading roles, but this part belongs to fate alone.

Stars Will Take Part in National Open Golf Meet

Proceeds Will Go To Navy Relief Society and the U.S.O.

NEW YORK, May 7 (AP)—With such masters as Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan, Craig Wood, Bobby Jones and many others already entered and more coming every day, the Hale America National Open Golf tournament not only positively will be held June 18-21 at Chicago, but it promises to be a glowing success, the United States Golf Association said today.

The announcement came in the form of a refutation of a gloomy prophecy by President Ed Dudley of the P. G. A. at Philadelphia that the event might be cancelled for lack of interest. It seems that big Ed was blue because only about 200 entries were in the box at this time, about half of them amateurs.

The tournaments are being sponsored jointly by the U. S. G. A. and the P. G. A., with Francis Quimet of Boston, chairman of the joint committee. Local and sectional qualifying rounds are to be held all over the country, with net proceeds both from those and the tournament printed in Polish in the world to proper going to the Navy Relief day.

Baseball Universal

The Chicago division of the American Baseball Congress has aroused so much interest in amateur baseball that it provides a weekly column in Polish for one of the Chicago foreign language papers, with the country, with net proceeds both from those and the tournament printed in Polish in the world to proper going to the Navy Relief day.

KEEP YOUR ONLY ENTRY
IF YOUR partner has fortunately led your only long suit against the opponents' No Trump game, and your hand contains no high cards except the ace of that suit, you will find that it generally pays to withhold it from the first trick, and then come in later. It may even be well to let two or even three tricks in the suit go by before playing your single entry, thereby enabling you finally to take one or more decisive tricks with a small card or cards.

One duplicate declarer got just enough help on this deal to make his contract, when East's lead of the diamond Q was overtaken by West's A. North won the return and immediately knocked out the spade A. East was able to cash the diamond J, 10, 9, but could not put West in the lead again, so declarer finished up the deal, making his contract with his one trick in diamonds, three in spades, two in hearts and three in clubs when the finesse was guessed correctly. Another declarer was set because West let the diamond Q lose to the K, playing his 5 on it. When North later lost a trick to the spade A, West let the diamond 9 and J go through, finally taking his A on the 10 and cashing the 7 for the setting trick.

In Memoriam

In loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, Ruben E. Baker, who departed this life four years ago today, May 7, 1938.

Time may pass and bring its changes, but his memory will be cherished. In the hearts that hold him dear.

HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN
5-7-11-T

In loving memory of our beloved husband and father, John Thomas, who died 4 years ago today, May 8, 1938.

Four years have passed since that sad day, when one we loved was called away. This strange, yet true, I wonder why, the good are always first to die. One of the best God could send, a loving father and a faithful friend, a beautiful memory left behind, in silence he suffered, in patience he bore, till God called him home to suffer no more.

Sadly missed by his wife,

Two More Baker Cases Concluded; Verdicts Awaited

Hagerstown Attorney Tried on Charges of Embezzling $3,500

Testimony was completed late yesterday afternoon in two more of the embezzlement cases against C. Walter Baker, Hagerstown attorney, and another trial was scheduled to get underway today, although there were indications that a decision might be handed down in the morning by the three-judge court on the five cases heard to date.

There was no night session of court last night, but the three judges of the circuit were to confer at the court house, possibly on the law and the evidence in the cases now under advisement, and this led to speculation that a decision may be imminent in view of the fact that State's Attorney Charles P. Wasmann has asked for early verdicts so that he may determine the disposition of the three remaining cases.

Trials To Continue
Until a verdict is handed down in one or more of the cases heard so far, he will continue the trials, the state's attorney said. If one or more convictions are obtained, it is possible that the pending indictments might be dismissed or continued.

As the trials entered their fourth day yesterday, the judges heard testimony alleging that Baker embezzled funds aggregating $3,500 which had been entrusted to him for investment by Mrs. Vernie E. Beckley, 56-year-old Hagerstown widow. The charges are contained in two indictments found by the Washington county grand jury, but they were consolidated and tried jointly.

At the outset, Defense Attorney Leo Weinberg moved that the indictments be quashed on the ground that Baker was not an agent for Mrs. Beckley and, therefore, was not chargeable with crime under the Maryland embezzlement statute. The defendant's role in the transactions was that of "investment banker," according to Weinberg, who contended that the wisdom of the purported investment, one of the matters at issue, is a question for equity, not criminal court.

Motion Over-ruled
His motion to quash the charges over-ruled, he later moved that all state testimony relative to the alleged worthlessness of the supposed investment be admitted subject to exception.

The state alleges that Mrs. Beckley directed Baker in January, 1941, to place $1,175 in funds he held for her in a first mortgage and that, instead, Baker appropriated the funds for his own use, along with an additional $2,325, which he persuaded her to give him in July, 1941.

According to the prosecution version of the transaction, the defendant "invested" the total of $3,500 in a worthless third mortgage on property titled in the name of the Arcade Realty and Mortgage Company, Inc., a concern which is (Continued on Page 13, Col. 3)

SUPPLY OF SUGAR FOR CANNING CUT

Cumberlanders as well as other Marylanders along with residents of several other states will have to get along on a sharply reduced sugar allowance for canning, the Office of Price Administration officials announced in Baltimore yesterday.

Instead of the five pounds per person figure set for the rest of the nation, Marylanders, along with residents of Pennsylvania, Delaware and several other East coast states, will be limited to one pound per person for this month and June, they declared.

After July 1, OPA spokesmen indicated, the remaining four pounds of sugar for canning per person will likely be made available here. Use of sugar-saving cooking and canning methods, they said, should prevent any serious hardship resulting from the ration cut.

Foreign Missions Are Discussed At Meeting

Presbyterian and Episcopal Groups Hear Mrs. Paul Erdman

The fourteenth joint meeting of the Women's Association of the First Presbyterian church and the Women's Auxiliary of the Emmanuel Episcopal church was held last evening in the Presbyterian lecture hall, with Mrs. Paul Erdman, Syria, the guest speaker. She told her audience that practically all the missionary work in Syria is carried on by the Presbyterian and Episcopal churches.

A question which is constantly being asked, she said, is of the importance of the foreign mission work and if it is worth continuing. She quoted Lord Beaverbrook's reply to the English church, that it is only by building Christianity all over the world, that the evil crowding upon the world can be off-set. Answering the question of the dangers she admitted they were great but as in the World War one the mission work will be carried on through a greatly decreased staff.

Mrs. Peter G. Ervin, past president of the association gave the devotional on the theme, "Life is a Garden" developing it by showing that the lessons of faith, hope, trust and patience are learned there. She pointed out the need of God in everyday life as well as His help in growing a garden, stressing the fact that neglect is the greatest enemy of both, Christian life and a garden.

Mrs. Lloyd R. Meyers and Mrs. R. L. Critchfield greeted the seventy guests who attended. Mrs. Raymond Laird played the prelude; Mrs. Porter D. Collins, president of the association opened the meeting with the group singing of "O Beautiful for Spacious Skies" and gave the address of welcome and Mrs. Richard R. Sitzer, president of the Episcopal auxiliary responded.

Mrs. Edgar Vandegrift introduced the guest speaker. Two members of each circle of the host church assisted in serving refreshments at the social hour which followed.

Ten Boy Scout Troops Reserve Sites at Camp

Sea Scout Group Will Meet Sunday; Longfellow To Speak May 12

Ten troops of Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, have reserved eight sites for the annual summer camp at Camp Potomac on the Millston farm near Springfield, W. Va. It was announced yesterday by Ray C. Laird, scout executive. The camp will open July 4 and closes August 1.

Troop 69, of Port Ashby, W. Va., will go to camp the week of July 4 to 11; Troops 1 and 71, of Cumberland, will be combined for the week of July 11-18, and Troop 7, of Cumberland, will be at the camp the same week. Three Frostburg troops have reserved the dates July 19 to 25. They are 46 and 26 which will be combined and 43. Troop 23, of Cumberland, will go to camp the week of July 25-August 1.

Still Open
Laird said that eight additional sites are still open at the camp. The sea scout committee comprising Martin Watson, of the Tri-Towns, chairman of senior scouting for the council; Harry M. Muna, of Cumberland; John Steiding, of Midland; John Kyle, of Frostburg; Carl Millan, of the Tri-Towns, and Howard Naylor, of Oakland, will meet Saturday, May 10, at 2:30 p. m., at the Deep Creek Yacht Club to conclude arrangements for a week's sea scout camp at the lake in August. W. Jack Watson, scout executive of Washington-Greene council, with headquarters at Washington, Pa., will attend the meeting and visit the camp site.

Deadline for Reservations
Reservations for the Scout Leaders' Appreciation Dinner, scheduled for Tuesday, May 12, at 6:30 p. m., in the Cresaptown school, must be made by this evening.

Commodore W. E. Longfellow, pioneer of the Life-Saving Service for the American Red Cross, will be the guest speaker on the occasion. His topic will be "What's Under Your Hat for America?" Commodore Longfellow will stop here while en route to Minneapolis. Red Cross service has been his profession but scouting has been his hobby for over thirty years.

Certificates and seals will be presented to leaders and the new sound movie, "Camping with the Troop" will be shown.

Group singing will be led by Jack E. Platt, of Allegheny high school.

Six Months Sentence Given Frostburg Man On Federal Charge

Frederick Kemp, 43, of Frostburg, was sentenced to six months in prison Wednesday in Federal court in Baltimore on a charge of sale and possession of illegal whiskey.

Frank C. Hartman, 38, also of Frostburg, was placed on probation for a period of two years on the same charge.

The men were arrested in January by federal agents. A slot machine was also seized in the raid on the premises at 14 Mechanic alley which was allegedly patronized by both white and negro persons. Nine and a half gallons of whiskey and seven cases of beer were found on the premises.

Suspended Jail Term Given Man on Charge Of Theft of Oil
Allan Kelly, of the Tri-Towns section, was given a suspended sentence of six months in the jail yesterday in trial magistrates court on a charge of taking a case of oil from the Devon Club at Luke.

Kelly was ordered to refrain from the use of alcoholic drinks and seek employment. Mike Digioia, also of Tri-Towns, implicated in the same case was ordered to pay part of the money as restitution for the stolen oil. Emil DiUbaldo, of the Tri-Towns, who purchased the oil, was also ordered to share in the cost of restitution to the Devon Club.

Conlon Receives Training Schedule For Minute Men

Local Companies Will Receive Instruction and Drill Tonight

A preliminary training schedule of the infantry companies of the Maryland Minute Men, including instructions for six assemblies, was received yesterday by Capt. Thomas P. Conlon, of Company C, Maryland State Guard, who has been appointed by Governor O'Connor to complete the local battalion.

Must Assemble Quickly
It is pointed out that since the primary mission of the Maryland Minute Men is the prompt and effective defense of their home communities against general disorder, general sabotage or any other enemy effort, the principle purpose of the training of the companies will be to enable them to quickly assemble at the objectives that are designated to protect, and to utilize to the fullest extent possible that defensive opportunities of these localities and installations of their respective home communities.

In order to reach such protective positions it will be necessary for the companies to be trained in formations and marching by squads, by platoons and as a company. Undue emphasis, however, will not be placed on the manner in which the weapons are carried, although general rules of safety must be enforced and uniformity in the carrying of weapons should be achieved to the fullest extent possible when the different types of weapons available are considered.

Firearms Are Stressed
The training schedule specifies that men who have been able to arm themselves with lighter caliber rifles will be formed in a separate squad of each platoon. Men who have been able to arm themselves with heavy caliber rifles will be formed in one squad as a part of each of the two platoons of the company. Men armed with shotguns will be formed in the third squad of each platoon.

Company commanders, as soon as commissioned, are to designate an acting first sergeant and acting supply sergeants; two acting guide sergeants and six acting corporals. These men will not be considered permanently appointed non-commissioned officers or warranted as such prior to sixty days' satisfactory service in their respective companies. After sixty days' service the company commanders are authorized to permanently appoint or warrant such non-commissioned officers.

Funds Not Available Now
No money is available at this time to purchase either arms, uniforms or other equipment, or to pay for telephone, postage or other expenses of the Reserve militia companies. However, the Military Department of the State is prepared to make all reasonable effort to secure an adequate supply of ammunition for both emergency use and for practice purposes.

Company commanders are authorized to enlist additional men as members of their respective units until the enlisted personnel of the company reaches 100 men. The minimum number of men to a unit is fifty. Enlisted men must be desirable citizens of the state and between eighteen and sixty-four years of age.

Mt. Savage Residents Ask Court To Settle Water Rights Dispute

Suit Requests Judges To Put an End to 'Doubt and Confusion'

In a novel equity suit docketed yesterday, judges of the circuit court are asked to construe clauses of two deeds with reference to water rights of four Mt. Savage residents.

The bill of complaint, filed by Noel Spruok and David Kaufman, attorneys, lists Harry R. Kerby and Mr. and Mrs. Jess W. Blank as plaintiffs and Harvey W. C. Whitacre as defendant.

The plaintiffs own property at Mt. Savage, the original deed to which reserves to the Union Mining Company all water rights to springs located on the land but provides that the owner is to have full use of the water," the petition states. Whitacre's deed to property nearby gives him the right to pipe water from an old spring in Brick Yard Row, even for domestic purposes, but provides that he shall "in no wise have monopoly of same."

This clause in Whitacre's deed apparently refers to the spring on

Democracy Will Face Test after War, Davis Says

Terms Present World Brawl a Revolution, Not Just a War

Democracy and its survival will face the supreme test following the present World War, Howard Pierce Davis, veteran editor, news analyst, and commentator, told an audience at the final Community Forum lecture last night at Allegheny high school.

"If the United Nations follow the same course as the Allies did following the first World War then we face recurrent wars at more frequent intervals," Davis declared. America and her allies must be prepared to not only aid in reconstructing the world but also must be prepared to extend them the fruits of democracy, he added.

"This present world brawl is not just a war, Davis said it is a revolution of the have-not nations in a search for resources and we ourselves are revolting against domination by the privileged," Davis declared.

World Needs Democracy
"What the world and its peoples need is democracy both as social and political concepts," he said. Davis said our American Revolution was a localized convulsion which resulted from reactionary rulers of England failing to grant freedom from domination.

This set the world on fire and inspired the oppressed peoples of France and other nations to revolt against a privileged class which would not heed its prophets of social and economic justice. The industrial revolution is also responsible for the recurrent wars between the European nations in a fight for markets and resources, Davis added.

Woodrow Wilson's fourteen points would probably have prevented many of the ills of the world today if his concepts of self-determination, a ban on power politics, and secret pacts had been followed.

Germans Abhor Communism
Germany fell into the dark ways of Nazism as a result not only of the Versailles treaty but mainly because of the results of inflation in that nation, Davis remarked. The German people had two courses open, Nazism or Communism, Davis said, and she chose Nazism.

The rise of Communism brought on Fascism which is only another form of oppression for freedom loving peoples, Davis said. We have Fascism here in America but it is not very well organized, he added. Speaking of Germany, Davis said the people have fallen under the yoke of a "bunch of thugs" and Hitler is not by any means the worst of the crowd. Von Ribbentrop is the evil genius of many of the vile workings of Nazism, Davis told the audience.

"We in America must make democracy work," Davis said. "Democracy is not a relic which can be placed under glass to be admired, it is an organism and must grow in order that we advance toward more social, economic and political equality," Davis explained.

"Democracy is something we must have in our hearts," he added.

Russia Smashes Hitler
Russia and China came in for comment by Davis who said that present day Russia is a realistic government and will drop any parts of Communism which will not work. (Continued on Page 10, Col. 3)

Moslems Held Vital Factor In World War

Islam Must Be Won to Cause of United Nations, Kiwanians Told

The important role played by the Moslem world in the present conflict was stressed yesterday by Mrs. Paul Erdman, formerly of Beirut, Syria, in a talk at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Kiwanis club at Central Y.M.C.A.

Mrs. Erdman, whose husband is managing editor of the American Mission Press in Beirut, pointed out that Moslems, numbering 250,000,000, constitute one-seventh of the world's population and that their concentration in strategic locations in the theater of war is fraught with danger unless they are won to the cause of the United Nations.

Explaining that Islam is both a religion and a political program, the speaker said the peril lies in the fact that it is largely totalitarian in set-up and philosophy, and thus has fascism and national socialism have appealing characteristics to Islam's adherents. In other words, she asserted, the Nazi program has within it basic elements that are within Islam.

Islam's leaders are divided, although most of them in the Near East are now apparently pro-United Nations and pro-democratic. Mrs. Erdman reported, adding, however, that there is a strong pro-fascist bloc.

One important fact emphasized by the speaker was that the majority of Moslems take an expedient view, wishing to throw in their lot with the ultimate victor. For this reason, she said, it is necessary for the United Nations to show their strength and their ability to come out on top in the war.
